GRADUATE SCHOOL OF BIOMEDICAL SCIENCES

The Biomedical Sciences program is designed to promote integration of the various biomedical disciplines into a single graduate-level educational experience. It provides a broad background in coursework, while maintaining flexibility to meet the needs and interests of individual students looking to become more competitive for medical, dental, nursing, physical therapy or physician assistant school, and advance their current biomedical sciences career.

About the Biomedical Sciences Program

Program Highlights:

- Multidisciplinary, 30-credit evening program
- It can be completed in 3 semesters; however, if a student is commuting or has other responsibilities like working, child care, parental care, etc., then program completion may be slightly longer to accommodate a slower pace of study.
- Programs are offered on a full- or part-time evening basis
- Students can be admitted in Fall or Spring semesters

Master of Biomedical Science (non-thesis) Curriculum:

Required Courses:

- Biochemistry and Molecular Biology
- Biomedical Anatomy
- Biomedical Data Analysis
- Cell Biology
- Human Genetics
- Immunology
- Microbiology
- System Physiology

Elective credits complete the remainder of the 30-credit degree program.

Certificate in Biomedical Science

This program offers graduate-level instruction that prepares students for entry-level positions in the field or provides a basis for more advanced degrees in biomedical sciences. Students will choose 18 credits from our required courses and can earn the certificate in as little as one year.

What The Students Had To Say

Sunkesula Sagar, DO, MS

Master of Biomedical Sciences
RowanGSBS '15

Doctor of Osteopathic Medicine,
RowanSOM '19

"RowanGSBS is by far, the best and biggest decision I made as a student. This experience allowed me to help me make my decision to transition over to medical school, and get a step-up in my education. The faculty is very helpful and the mere two years I spent at RowanGSBS changed my future."
